Mojo spotlight

Big news in the world of Microsoft and PPM tools: Microsoft has confirmed Project Online will no longer be developed or supported. For many organisations, this trusted tool has been the backbone of project delivery. But with retirement now firmly on the roadmap, the question everyone's asking is: what's next?

We are all about the opportunity this brings to do things smarter and drive efficiency into PMOs. For decision makers, the real opportunity is to envision and build a future-proofed, agile, AI-enabled, outcome-driven future for your PMO.

The milestones

October 2025 – End of sales

After this date, Microsoft will stop selling Project Online licences to new customers.

Customers: If you're already using Project Online, nothing changes immediately. But you won't be able to add new standalone Project Online subscriptions. Any expansion of your environment will need to be planned differently.

April 2026 – Workflow support ends

Project Online relies heavily on legacy SharePoint 2013 workflows. From April 2026, Microsoft will stop supporting those workflows.

Are you ready for the opportunities for PMO after Project Online retires?

Project spotlight

We are excited to spotlight a project that we have recently completed for the Department of State Development, Infrastructure, and Planning (DSDIP).

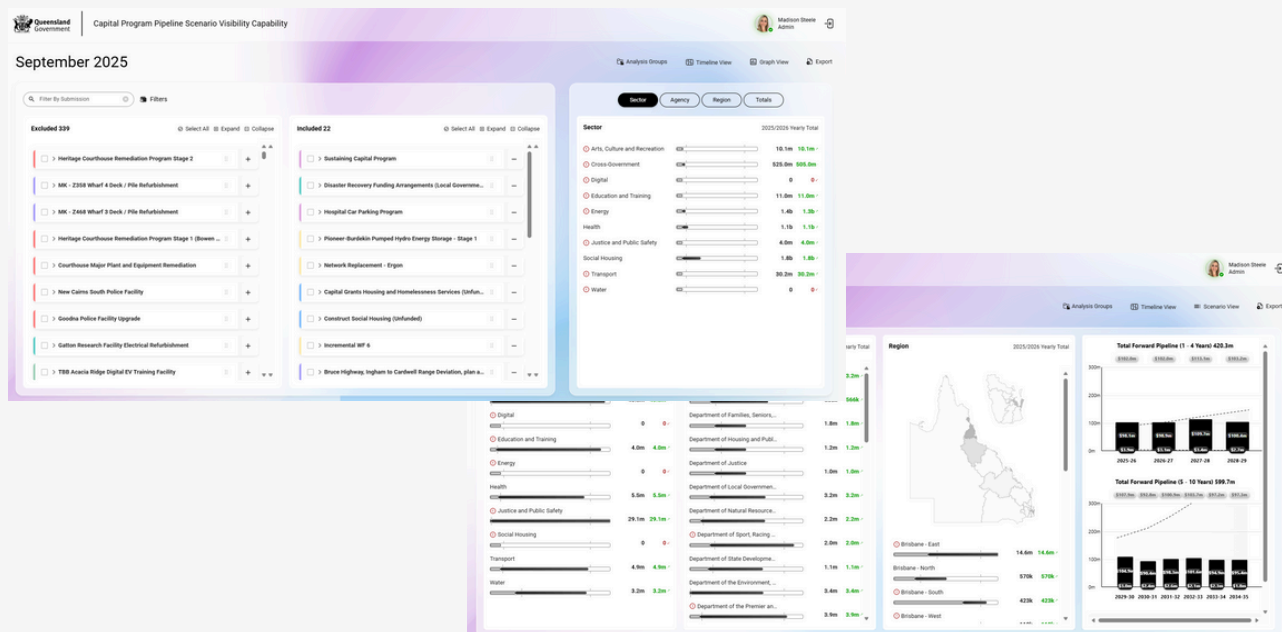

DSDIP facilitates the capital planning and reporting for agencies across Queensland. Senior stakeholders required a Capital Program Pipeline Scenario Tool to enable decision-makers to model and compare multiple funding scenarios for future capital investments.

The tool we designed and built in collaboration with key users provides dynamic, real-time functionality, enabling teams to collaborate on and compare multiple funding scenarios. It offers live visibility of allocated spend by sector, agency, and region, allowing users to identify where budgets may exceed their guardrails across a 10-year outlook.

This tool will be rolled out shortly for operational use in the next planning period. We are confident that the up-to-date user interface will create a positive user experience for stakeholders who are trying to gain a better understanding of what the future could look like.

We anticipate that as people use the tool more frequently, we will receive feedback on how to improve its functionality and expand its scope. This is what we thrive on - partnering with our customers to continuously improve.

If you are facing a similar business problem or would like to hear more about the Infrastructure Scenario tool, get in touch with our Digital & App Innovation team below.

Community spotlight

This month has been a big one for our Mojo Soup community, with lots of bittersweet and exciting changes to report.

Our Senior M365 Consultant, Vitorio Heral, bids farewell to Mojo Soup after an amazing 3 years with us. We're wishing Rio all the best in what's next for him and will miss his vibrant energy and sneakers in the office!

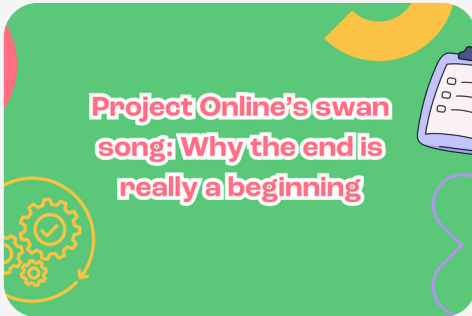

Our very own Madison Steele is moving into a new role within Mojo Soup. Maddie has been an all-star Technical Business Analyst and M365 technician for years now, and it's time for the latter role to play a bigger part in her day-to-day responsibilities. While you may still see Maddie unpacking business and technical requirements, she will be refining her technical brilliance in her new role as Senior Technical Consultant. Congratulations to Maddie on her move into the Digital & App Innovation Team!

Last but not least, we want to wish the lovely Taz Jones a fantastic time on parental leave as she welcomes her second daughter into the world. We hope you soak up all the newborn time, and we look forward to reconnecting when you return in the new year!
